Identity Migration Workshop

Leveraging modern identity solutions to tackle evolving identity challenges

As security threats evolve, so must our security solutions

Business operations are becoming more complex as the number and type of users increases, combined with their ability to access a growing diversity of IT services, many of which are making the leap to the cloud. Companies must be able to identify who the users are, know their roles in the organization, and control which systems they are authorized to access. This requires a modern Identity Governance and Administration (IGA) program that efficiently links users to enterprise technology services and a modern identity solution, like SailPoint, to address these technical complexities. Legacy identity solutions are simply no longer sufficient to address the modern security threat landscape.
